Description

Tucked away in an idyllic corner of North East Somerset lies Lakins Meadow. This secluded expanse of rolling pastureland is a blank slate, perfect for those with a vision for tree planting or rewilding projects aimed at conservation or carbon offsetting. The meadow itself is a tranquil slice of the countryside, offering picturesque views across neighbouring farmland.

Upon entering from the east, visitors are greeted by a sturdy area of hardstanding, providing ample space for vehicle parking. Adjacent to this is a robust stone water trough, still operational and an invaluable asset for any agricultural or conservation activities. From this point, the land unfurls south-westerly, rising gently as it leads you up towards the western boundary markers. The meadow is a tapestry of health, with vibrant green grasses woven with wildflowers. In times of heavy rainfall, a natural pond forms, nestled in a hollow near the eastern boundary, adding to the meadow’s charm. The seasonal pond is of great value to local wildlife.

The perimeter is defined by age-old hedgerows and some broadleaved trees, creating a private enclave that doubles as a sanctuary for an array of wildlife, from mammals to insects and birds. It’s not uncommon to spot deer, rabbits and hares, especially at dawn or dusk, making it a true wildlife retreat. The hedgerows serve as a local seed bank, encouraging natural regeneration and complementing any active tree planting efforts.

Strategically positioned, Lakins Meadow is only a 40-minute journey from the urban pulse of Bristol and only 20 minutes from the historic allure of Bath. It stands as an accessible retreat from the bustle of daily life, offering potential stewards a chance to mould this land according to their vision and create a legacy of conservation for future generations to cherish.

The purchasers of the meadow will be asked to enter into a covenant to ensure the quiet and peaceful enjoyment of adjoining woodlands and meadows.

Wildlife

Rabbits, deer, and hares enliven Lakins Meadow, offering shelter and sustenance. A closer inspection reveals well-trodden trails crisscrossing the meadow, the tell-tale signs of its flourishing ecosystem. Buzzards have also been spotted overhead as well as a plethora of other birds.

Local area and history

Clandown: A Historical Tapestry Woven in Coal and Stone

The Village’s Mining Heritage Clandown, once the heartbeat of the Somerset Coalfield, stands as a testament to the industrious spirit that fuelled the region. Established in the early 19th century, the village’s original colliery was a cornerstone of local industry, opening its shafts in 1811. For over a century and a half, the mines thrived, with the last of the pits drawing to a close in the twilight of the 1960s. Today, Clandown lies equidistant between The Cotswolds AONB and the Mendip Hills AONB.

Bowlditch Quarry A stone’s throw from the village lies Bowlditch Quarry, a SSSI. Only 0.25 hectares in size, the quarry is a geological marvel, offering a window into the Earth’s distant past. It is renowned as a “classic site” that presents an extraordinary sequence of strata, tracing the geological timeline from the Rhaetian to the Pliensbachian. This Lias section, with its attenuated and broken succession, serves as a living textbook for biostratigraphic principles, drawing interest from scholars and enthusiasts alike.
